THANKS AND ADVICE

Pennoyer Asks for One and Gives the Other.

A REMARKABLE PROCLAMATION

Webfoot People Asked to Implore Providence to Dispose of Cleveland.

SALEM, November 1.—Governor Pennoyer today issued the following Thanksgiving proclamation:

"I do hereby appoint the fourth Thursday of the present month as a day of thanksgiving to almighty God for blessings he has bestowed upon this commonwealth during the present year. God has indeed been most beneficient to our state and nation, and yet unjust and ill advised congressional legislation having made gold alone the full legal tender money, has so dwarfed and paralyzed business that the bounties of Providence are now denied to hundreds of thousand of people within the national domain who are not only without employment, but also without means of procuring food, raiment or shelter. While, therefore, the people of Oregon return thanks to God for His goodness, I do most earnestly recommend that they devoutly implore Him to dispose of the President of the United States, to secure the restoration of silver as a full legal tender money in accordance with the policy of the fathers of the republic, whereby our industries may be revived and the honest toilers of the land may procure their daily bread, not as alms, but as a reward for their labor."

Sued Her Mother.

LOS ANGELES, November 1.—In the justices' court yesterday Amelie Barre, a young girl, related a pathetic story of cruel treatment on the part of her stepfather and mother, V. A. Pernot and wife, well-to-do residents of Boyle Heights. Soon after the death of her father the girl received such harsh treatment that she had to leave home and take refuge with friends at San Pedro. Mrs. Fanny Thurston, who was appointed the girl's guardian, sued the Pernots to recover a piano, jewelry and other articles, claimed by the child as presents from her father. Justice Bartholomew awarded the plaintiff a greater part of the articles claimed.

Causing More Trouble.

SAN DIEGO, November 1.—The Seamen's Union is again making trouble along the water front of this city. Three non-union men belonging to the schooner Bertha Dolbeer were set upon by them singly and beaten yesterday when off the boat. A deputy constable was kept on the schooner and no overt act was committed there. The American ship William G. Davis was towed outside yesterday and anchored, awaiting the steamer Corona, which arrives tonight with the crew of the ship. The transfer was made outside to prevent trouble with the Sailors' Union, which threatened to get the men away if possible.

The Jury Bribers.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 1.—The preliminary examination of Frank McManus and State Senator Dunn on a charge of bribing the jury which acquitted Actor M. B. Curtis was commenced this afternoon. Mrs. Curtis was placed on the stand and testified that the defendants had made a proposition to her to fix the jury, but that they were never given any encouragement. J. N. E. Wilson, Curtis' attorney, testified that the defendants had approached him with a proposition to induce four of the jurors to vote for acquittal. They wanted $20,000 for this purpose, but were denied.

News From the Coal Field.

BENSON, A. T., November 1.—Parties returned yesterday from the San Marcial, Sonora, coal fields, for the working of which a syndicate recently secured a concession from the Mexican government. They brought a large quantity of anthracite coal taken from a ten and one-half foot stratum penetrated by a forty foot prospecting shaft. It is said that prospecting with a diamond drill has proved that these fields contain an almost inexhaustible supply of the finest of anthracite coal.

Extend Work at Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, November 1.—A bold and successful robbery occurred on First street between Hill and Broadway, early yesterday morning. F. E. McLaughlin was relieved of his spare change. McLaughlin is a printer, and was this way to his room. He was about half way between Broadway and Hill st., when he felt cold steel press to his ear. A gold watch and $90 were taken from him.

tisfaction in San Luis.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, November 1.—The news that 2000 men are to be employed by the Southern Pacific Railroad company later to accomplish the speedy closing the gap, between Elwood and Santa Marita, was received here with the great enthusiasm. No other topic is discussed upon the streets or in the hotels and general satisfaction reigns supreme.

Epidemic of Typhoid Fever.

VANCOUVER, November 1.—Owing to the prevalence of typhoid fever special precautions are being taken. All cases must be reported to the health officer. He intends to investigate the cause of the outbreak. The city now possesses a good sewerage and water system. The hospital is filled with cases and extra buildings are full.

Coal Company Pay Interest.

OAKLAND, November 1.—The Consolidated Piedmont Coal Company today went into the hands of a receiver. The directors of the company, finding that they could not interest due, asked that the mortgage be foreclosed. The capital stock of the company is $200,000, and bonds issued $92,000.

Tried Suicide.

SAN RAFAEL, November 1. — Mrs. Zingler, wife of Zingler, proprietor of the Broad Gauge saloon, attempted suicide yesterday morning by cutting the blood vessels in her wrist. She almost severed them. She said that she had nothing to live for and that she would try again.

Smuggling Case Set for Trial.

PORTLAND, Oregon, 31.—The cases of sixteen persons under indictment for smuggling opium Chinese into this port, were set for trial yesterday in the United States district court. The first of the cases, that of William Dunbar, is set for November 27th.

Baseball at Oakland.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 1.—The Bostons defeated the Oakland baseball team this afternoon by a score of 3 to 2. Batteries—Boston, Carney and Kittridge; Oakland, Horner and Spear. Hits—Boston, 1; Oakland, 8.

Killed by a Rolling Log.

SANTA CRUZ, November 1.—Yesterday afternoon Gabriel Rodoni was killed by log rolling on him at Monte Vista, this county.

The Markets.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 1.—Wheat—Inactive. December, $1.11¼; May, $1.23⅜.

PACIFIC COAST ITEMS.

Joseph Fitzgerald, ex-county clerk of Tuolumne, was found dead in his bed at Sonora, the result of suicide.

Albert Jacobs, 17 years old, has been sent to San Quentin for two years for grand larceny from Santa Rosa.

Sing Lung, a Chinese who shot and killed a countryman on Roberts Island a few weeks ago, has been found guilty of manslaughter.

It is now stated that the recent robbery of Treasurer Mulligan at Healdsburg was the work of an organized gang, implicating some prominent citizens of the county, and that should the perpetrators be apprehended, some startling and sensational developments may be looked for.

Work has been commenced again upon all the tunnels by the Southern Pacific company on the lower coast route, and their completion is now a matter of merely a few weeks. This action upon the part of the railroad has stimulated all business in San Luis Obispo, and nothing but smiling faces are seen upon the streets.

The lemon growers of Ontario and Cucamonga propose to build a large warehouse with capacity sufficient to care the entire crop. This will insure uniformity and give the product of lemon groves of that locality a reliable standing in the market. As a result the crop will be properly cured and stored and command the highest selling price.

E. R. Vincent, the highway robber was sentenced at Portland to fifteen years in the penitentiary. He was one of the men who ran Chinese laborers out of vineyards near Fresno a month ago. J. D. Hughes, Vincent's pal, was sentenced to twelve years. John Mitchell, the burglar, received six years. In three days Mitchell robbed three houses and got about $200 worth of booty.

SOME SUGGESTIONS ABOUT PLANTING AN ORCHARD.

A Matter Worth the Attention of Orchards in This County.

In view of the growing importance of the olive industry in this county the following practical suggestions of John S. Calkins will be interesting.

Mr. Calkins is one of the recognized authorities in this industry in California, and his suggestions will be of great practical value to persons planting out orchards.

The excellent growth made by experimental trees in Fresno and the heavy fruitage of the trees indicates that this will soon develop into one of the characteristic industries of Fresno county. Mr. Calkins says:

Olive trees may be transplanted successfully from the nursery to the orchard at one year of age, when they are from one to two feet high, though they require more careful handling than older trees. Two-year-old trees usually run from three to five feet high, and are generally preferred by planters to yearlings, as they withstand exposure at the time of planting better, and require less nursing in orchard the first year.

Although olive trees are very tenacious of life when once established in the ground, they require the utmost care in transplanting, especially yearlings, and should be carefully protected from the sun and wind, both tops and roots, from the time they are taken up till they are planted; the ground should be well settled about their roots during the operation of planting, which is best done by means of water; it is essential that the ground about their roots should be quite moist for the first few weeks after setting them.

If the rains do not supply sufficient moisture, they should be watered. It is not uncommon for the leaves to drop off after they are planted, or even before, but the trees will come out again in leaf and thrive if the vitality of the roots has not been destroyed by undue exposure. The trees should be firmly tied to strong stakes well driven in the ground at the time of planting.

This should be done while the trees are dormant, or nearly so; in general, they are in this condition during December, January, February and March, though some seasons the growth does not cease during December and commences again in March in the southern part of the state. In some places where the olive thrives the ground freezes several inches deep; in such locations it would be well to defer planting till the freeze is over.

The planting season may be prolonged for several weeks by taking up the trees before they commence to grow, and "heeling them in" in a shady place, which will retard the new growth. I have transplanted many trees thus treated as late as May with only trifling loss; but it should be remembered by those who plant on unirrigable lands that trees planted in winter get the benefit of more rainfall than those planted during the spring.

The distance apart to plant olive trees so as to get the best results has been determined by Elwood Cooper. He planted an orchard in 1872, with trees twenty feet apart—108 to the acre—and some fifteen years afterward he found it necessary to thin out, and removed every other diagonal row, the remaining trees being about twenty-eight feet apart. If it is necessary to thin out again he recommends the removal of every other row; the remaining trees will then be forty feet apart. As he still favors this plan, after years of experience, planters may safely follow his example. This appears to be better than to plant the trees further apart at first with some short-lived trees or vines among them, as is sometimes recommended. The trees which are removed may be reset into a new orchard, where they will again come into profitable bearing.

JOHN S. CALKINS.

NO MARKET FOR SILVER

Its Purchase by the Government Has Ceased.

GROVER AFFIXES HIS SIGNATURE

WASHINGTON, November 1.—Silver purchases by the government ceased today. The purpose for which Cleveland called congress in its extraordinary session was accomplished at 4.25 this afternoon when he affixed his signature to the bill to repeal unconditionally the purchasing clause of the Sherman law.

Only twenty-seven men could be rallied for the last stand by the silver leaders. Their small following might have succeeded had they been led by experienced and skillful parliamentary tacticians. Neither Bryan nor Snodgrass, his lieutenant, are well versed in parliamentary procedure, and when thrown off their guard by a momentary distraction they exposed a flank by failing to follow one filibustering motion with another. Speaker Crisp overwhelmed them by putting the pending motion to order the previous question. It carried with a roar.

The filibusterers had been caught napping and nothing remained for them except to submit. For thirty minutes under the rule followed a rattle of oratory amid great confusion and excitement.

At its conclusion a vote was taken on Bland's free coinage substitute. There was a majority against it of 75. Then came the final vote on concurring in the senate amendments. The vote stood 183 for concurrence and 94 against. An analysis of the vote shows 124 Democrats, 68 Republicans and 1 Populist. Cannon of California voted for concurrence and 70 Democrats, 15 Republicans and 9 Populists against the motion.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION

Causes Much Discussion in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, November 1.—In the senate Hill offered a resolution to amend the rules to prevent filibustering, which was referred to the committee on rules; also another resolution authorizing the presiding officer to count a quorum if present and not voting.

Gray explained the provisions of the Chinese exclusion bill and Hoar offered an amendment in the shape of a substitute, eliminating all but the enacting clause. The amendment suspends Chinese immigration pending the settlement of the whole question by a treaty with the Chinese government, and amends the provisions of the existing law regarding the registration and trials of Chinese aliens.

Davis also offered a substitute providing for the repeal of all existing laws excluding Chinese immigration.

Palmer took exception to the provisions of the bill rejecting evidence in court of Chinese witnesses, and the clause refusing bail to Chinese arrested under the provisions of the bill before guilt was established.

Perkins of California said California people were satisfied with the present law. It is the administration and attorneys of the Chinese making a request for a change. A careful computation reveals the fact, Perkins said, that since they began coming to this country in numbers they had taken or sent back to China $810,000,000 of American money.

Dolph spoke in defense of the Geary act, and Squire offered an amendment appropriating $100,000 for the enforcement during the present fiscal year of the several acts regulating and prohibiting Chinese immigration and addressed the senate in its advocacy.

A Cheap Vessel.

NEW YORK, November 1.—The price paid by the Brazilian government for the torpedo boat Destroyer is $30,000. The money is payable in Brazil, though the formal delivery of the vessel will take place on her arrival in New York. The Brazilians have also purchased the deadly submarine gun and ten projectiles for firing. These have been used here in the net tests. The Destroyer will be ready to leave for Brazil in tow in ten days.

Contradicts Himself.

ST. LOUIS, November 1.—Actor Charles F. Coghan's announcement that Louise Thorn, the Scotch actress, who so long bore his name, was not his wife, flatly contradicts his sworn testimony before a London bankruptcy court in 1891. When questioned yesterday he said: "Ah, well, what of it? Perhaps I did. In cases of that sort it is not unusual for a man to say he is not married to a lady. Do you remember the testimony of the Prince of Wales in the Lady Mordaunt case?"

Mayor Harrison's Funeral.

CHICAGO, November 1.—The late Mayor Harrison was buried today with imposing ceremonies. Though the military walked eight abreast and carriages were driven close together three abreast, and a great number of society members moving in close order, it required hours for the procession to pass a given point.

Return of Weeks.

PORT EADS, La., November 1.—The steamer Foxhill from Costa Rica entered yesterday evening and proceeded to New Orleans last night. Among the passengers was Francis H. Weeks, the New York embezzler, in charge of Detectives Reilly and Gorichten.

County Treasurer's Receipts.

The several county officials have made returns of the receipts of their respective offices for the month of October, as follows:

|---|---|
| County clerk, fees | $ 724 70 |
| County recorder, fees | 490 20 |
| Sheriff, fees | 241 05 |
| Tax collector, licenses | 2448 45 |
| Total | $4105 00 |

THE RAILROADS.

THEIR GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP ADVOCATED.

An Old Citizen Replies to the Tulare Register—European Examples.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—In reading the Tulare Register man's observations upon the railroad question in your last Sunday's issue, one cannot help but experience a feeling of compassion for the misapplication of that gentleman's rich imagination. By proper training and direction such fine and lively imaginary talents might have produced such celebrated works as Milton's Paradise Lost, Bunyan's Pilgrims' Progress, Munchausen's Travels, or Colonel Seller's railroad line, running from Slouchburg to Corruptonville across the Columbia river.

These fine imaginary talents assert themselves everywhere throughout the whole of his railroad article. He imagines that all manner of queer things would take place if the government should own and operate the railroads of this country; and adroitly does he point out all those queer things, and that, too, without having a single fact to assist him or upon which to base his workmanship—his air castles and visionary political railroad operations.

Great talents, those! No other person ever heard or saw such queer things mentioned by the Register man taking place in Australia, Prussia, Norway, Sweden or in any country where the railroads are owned and operated by the government, and run not as in the United States to make millionaires, but in the interest of the whole people. Why the lack of such governmental railroad operation in this country should make it an exception to the general rule the world over, even his faithful servant, Imagination, failed to inform us.

Fearful railroad accidents are common occurrences in this country, but very seldom happen in such counties as have governmental roads. There the people do not complain that they are being robbed by railroad monopolies; on the contrary the fares are low, the service is efficient and there are no strikes by employes to interfere with traffic; everything goes like clock work, to the entire satisfaction of all classes of citizens.

If a certain road in this city employs say 1000 men, in Prussia such a road would have 5000 men—five to each one here—in its employ; and such a large number of men are employed for the prevention of accidents, to give efficient service, to protect the lives, limbs and property of the common people, and in every way to make the railroad service as perfect and safe as possible. Yet with such a large number of employes, entailing a very large expense, the rates are still very much lower in Prussia than in this country. That is due to the fact that the roads are owned and operated by the government, and not, as here, run by private capitalists simply for the purpose of squeezing as many millions of dollars out of the people as possible.

Here the object is to employ as few men as possible, and thus, and otherwise, run the roads upon a "cheap John scale, but to charge all that the traffic can bear, and often more, and as these monopolists often say: "Damn the people, we are running our roads to make money."

In Prussia the very opposite is the rule, namely: Give as many men employment as conveniently can be employed, make the roads as safe and durable as possible, irrespective of expenses, and charge as low rates as is compatible with the possible maintenance and operation of the roads in the interest of laboring men and that of all classes.

If our government owned and operated the railroads the results would logically be the same in this country as in Germany, Prussia, Norway or in other countries having governmental roads. The thousands of millions of dollars now making up the enormous profits of our millionaires would, as in those countries, remain in the hands of the people; the millions of acres of land now owned by railroad magnates would also have remained the property of the common people. The railroad employes would not as now be overworked and tired to the extent that they are unable to remember and obey orders. And because of that and because of the fact that there is not a sufficient number of men employed, terrible accidents frequently take place and slaughter our people in large numbers.

In the face of these facts, and others not herein mentioned, the Register man, in the name of reform and good government, is found standing in the shadow of that big, ugly giant, the Southern Pacific railroad monopoly; the Moses, not like the one of old delivering his people, but the Moses of greed and oppression; and from the bogsand sloughs of Tulare, the place of Mussel Slough fame and railroad butchery, the Register man's voice is heard singing the praises to the the railroad monopoly; when, instead of that, like a true reformer and patriot, he should be found upon the people's side, putting his shoulder to the wheel of progress and true reform, thus assisting in changing our present tyrannical and oppressive private railroad system into one which would be a blessing and a joy forever to the whole people.

FRESNO raisins are up to the gold standard in quality.

THE downfall of silver has restored confidence in Grover's ability as a dictator.

WE can't send our climate back East and sell it, but we can do the hospitable and invite the Easterners to come here and enjoy it "free gratis."

RECENT articles on poultry raising in THE REPUBLICAN have created a widespread interest. The probabilities are that within a year or two Fresno will be noted for her exports of eggs and fine fowls.

AN extra outside guard is employed at the Bakersfield jail to keep the hobos from breaking into the bastile. This comes of putting more comforts in a jail than can be found in straw stacks and at the back doors of cheerful givers.

PROPERTY to the amount of $709,000 destroyed the other day in Philadelphia by the explosion of a barrel of whisky. As a matter of dollars and cents, that seems to be a little ahead of the amount of damages usually caused by a single barrel of red liquor.

THE New York Sun professes to see in the Van Alen incident the conversion of President Cleveland to the sound principles of practical Democratic politics. That is one way of looking at it, of course. On the other hand, the expressions of grief by the Mugwumps over the fall of their idol are pathetic enough to touch a heart of stone. They are inconsolable.

IT was believed by a good many people who were opposed to the unconditional repeal of the Sherman act, that repeal would be followed by at least a temporary buoyancy in stocks and activity in the money market, but even that anticipation seems likely to meet with disappointment. On the day following repeal the following condition of markets in financial and commercial centers of the world was reported:

CHICAGO, October 31.—Wheat very weak today. * * December opened nearly 1 cent off at 65⅝, fell to 63⅝ and closed at 63¾.

NEW YORK, October 31.—Stocks opened weak, with a decline of ½ to 2¾. * * Stocks broke after noon under a heavy drive. * * The market closed weak.

LONDON, October 31.—The repeal of the Sherman act knocked silver to 31 7-16 and depressed Eastern exchanges. * * There were immense realizings here on American shares.

MR. BELLAMY, of looking backward fame, is now giving some attention to looking at things as they exist under present conditions. In a recent issue of his paper, the New Nation, he says concerning the course of the President: "Mr. Cleveland has furnished two distinct and adequate grounds of impeachment, on account of breach of his oath of office to carry out the laws. One count relates to his open and admitted failure to buy 4,500,000 ounces of silver per month as required by law. The other count relates to his failure to take the first step to carry out the Geary Chinese law, which should have been enforced since July 1st. Mind well, these charges are not based upon any assumption of the righteousness of these laws. But they are laws, and the President is sworn to carry them out whether he likes them or not, and he has not done so. If this sort of thing is going to be tolerated, we might as well discontinue congress for good and all, and send to Russia for a czar. We venture a prediction: If President Cleveland does not change his course he will be impeached before he gets through his term of office, and the house of representatives elected in 1894 will do it."

THE HUGE PUMPKIN CO.

Mourns Over the Prominence of Its Rivals.

Office of the Huge Pumpkin Company.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—In justice to ourselves, we deem it proper to offer some words of explanation regarding our course of business during the present season. At the opening we "firmly believed" that the price agreed upon would be well maintained, and that we could shade these prices enough to do a very large business and still let our "constituency" out in good shape.

But, alas, for our hopes! No sooner had we entered upon what promised to be a brilliant season than rival houses, contrary to all rules of honor, actually met our prices—thus virtually ignoring their compact to maintain the same at a living rate. Not only that, but they are willing to guarantee the goods to correspond to the brand on the package! Of course, if they care to do business in that way, it is their own concern and they must suffer the consequences.

Without doubt it is useless to try and get good prices in an overcrowded market, and hence it may be advisable to delay sending more goods forward until later. If rival houses will kindly take the hint and hold their goods for a time, we will continue our policy of sliding ours forward quietly, in order to be in position to take any advantage in the market which may present itself.

Our name is a synonym for an honest brand, and we can tell by a glance just what the brand is—on the box. (See affidavit by our foreman.) By order of PRESIDENT OF H. P. Co.

"Friends."

The above is the title of the new play which has been exciting so much interest in San Francisco, and which will be produced at the Barton Monday evening, November 6th. The play is by Edwin Milton Royle, who also takes one of the principal parts. The young actor-author has evidently bestowed much deep thought and earnest study and has shown a dramatist's skill, as well as not a little originality in the construction of his story and the evolution of a plot that is coherent, strong and replete with human interest.

The young author has a fresh, breezy and vigorous style that makes his comedy pleasing and his domestic scenes impressive, and he has made a strong play. That which commands the attention throughout the play is the noble quality of friendship displayed by Jack Paden towards Adrio Karjo, his friend, in furthering his interests with Marguerite, the woman they both love, though Karjo is not aware that Jack is crowding his own affections back into his heart and masking them with a smile. The play has much human interest and will doubtless attract a large house.

The company presenting "Friends" is a very strong one, comprising such well-known people as Selena Fetter Royle, who was several years the leading support for Stuart Robson and later in the same position with Alex Salvini; Edwin Milton Royle, the author of the play; E. D. Lyons, for several seasons leading character actor with Henry Irving at the Lyceum theater, London; Lucius Henderson and Harry Allen; the well-known operatic comedian, Henry Bargman, who was for many years with Crane; Carrie Berg, Louise Wakelee, Nellette Reed and others.

Boys, It Wont Pay.

From the Tulare Register.

It cannot be said that train and station robbing really pays. It looked for a while as though any fool could hold up a train or rob a station, step out into the night and be as safe as though he were in Abraham's bosom, but the Daltons are dead, John Sontag is dead, George Sontag is shot to pieces and in Folsom, Evans will be hanged, Gibson is in San Quentin and Stokes will get there today. Times are hard, but most anything will pay better than robbing trains and stations, or even Chinamen.

An Embarrassing Question.

From the Tulare Register.

An infant son of a dyed in the wool Democrat startled the old gentleman the other morning at the breakfast table by suddenly asking: "Papa, are you still a Democrat?" and it is said that for the first time in his life the old gent told the only did not stand up and yell, "was born a Democrat and will die a Democrat, by thunder," but actually blushed scarlet, laughed the incident off with the rest of them and never did answer that boy's question.

The Social Snack.

From the Stockton Mail.

Will somebody explain this thing? The Portland, Or., Congregationalists who tried Rev. C. L. Corwin for kissing an ewe of his flock, voted to expel him from the church. The only members of the committee who voted against it were two women. Probably they thought that the parson was too valuable a man to be lost, but still an explanation of the motive behind their votes would not be out of place.

A STRANGE STORY

Involving a Young Girl's Honor.

CONFLICTING STORIES TOLD

A Prominent Citizen Charged With Her Ruin—Other Complications.

The arrest of L. P. Van Doren on a charge of abduction Tuesday at the instance of A. J. Bearden was the first outcropping of what seems destined to become a celebrated case. Bearden accused Van Doren of abducting his daughter Maud, but late in the day withdrew the complaint. Van Doren and Miss Maud Bearden are engaged to be married, and their meeting, as stated in yesterday's REPUBLICAN, was for the purpose of renewing the engagement under oath, before a notary public. The document is also something of the nature of a promise of marriage.

Yesterday morning, at 9 o'clock, Mr. Bearden met Van Doren in Lawyer G. B. Graham's office.

"Will you be here fifteen minutes?" asked Bearden.

"Why," questioned Van Doren, "in here?"

"Because I want to go and get a shotgun and blow the top of your head off if you don't marry my daughter, or at least show the contracts that you have had her sign, or tell what you have had her sign, and which she says is a marriage contract."

Bearden thereupon left the office, and Van Doren swore to a complaint charging Bearden with making threats to kill him. Mr. Bearden was arrested, but allowed to go on his own recognizance by Justice Austin. The examination was held in the afternoon and judgment will be rendered when the testimony is transcribed.

So far the evident misunderstanding between Mr. Bearden and Van Doren reveals nothing remarkable, but matters become plainer when it is stated that it is alleged Miss Maud Bearden has been violated by Lee Blasingame and that Van Doren, the girl's lover, wishes to have Blasingame punished; while the girl's parents, according to Van Doren, Rev. J. H. Collins and others, wish to have the affair hushed.

The whole story has been generally known for some weeks, and received considerable discussion. It was also known that the grand jury was looking into the matter and developments were anxiously awaited. The grand jury was slow, however, and the parties to the case themselves precipitated the publication of the story, throwing aside all consideration of consequences in their bitter enmity toward each other.

THE VICTIM'S AFFIDAVIT.

The story of Miss Maud Bearden's misfortune is told in two affidavits, one made by herself and the other by her sister, Mrs. A. R. Noyes, who lives in San Francisco.

A portion of Miss Maud Bearden's statement is not fit for publication, but the circumstances as related by her are briefly as follows:

She stated that on May 22, 1891, she was 13 years old, and on September 14, 1891, she with her family came to Fresno and took up their residence at Lee Blasingame's vineyard, about four miles from Fresno.

On Thanksgiving day, November 26, 1891, Maud happened to be left alone in the house with Blasingame. While she was standing by a window up stairs in the hall he suddenly came up behind her and picked her up, and carrying her into his room accomplished her ruin.

After that and until May 17, 1892, Maud alleges Blasingame came to her room nearly every night that he was at the vineyard. These acts were repeated subsequently with considerable frequency until April 15th last, when the relations between Blasingame and Miss Maud Bearden ceased.

This statement was sworn to by Miss Bearden on September 12, 1893, before Justice Crichton.

Miss Maud Bearden's sister, Mrs. A. R. Noyes, made an affidavit on September 14, 1893, before Notary Public Daniel Hanlon at San Francisco, substantiating Maud's statement. Mrs. Noyes wrote the affidavit she made, and Maud's is in her own handwriting.

Statements concerning this peculiar case from the various persons interested are given further on. Mr. Blasingame, not being in the city, his side of the case could not be obtained. District Attorney Church expressed himself as follows:

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY TALKS.

"In the first place," said Judge Church, "Mr. Van Doren came here while the Heath case was going on, and was much about my office and talked much with Miss Lou Bearden, my stenographer, sister of Maud Bearden. One day I heard him and Miss Bearden in such loud conversation that I afterwards asked her what the trouble was. She replied that it was some trouble with Lee Blasingame, but told me no more.

"Van Doren soon called at the Bearden residence, and I am told that he there said that he was a detective and had come here in the interest of Heath, but added: 'I see that it is all the other way, and I will do nothing.' He continued to come to my office, but I paid little attention to him. I would not now allow him to loaf around my office.

"Finally the charge was made against Blasingame. As public prosecutor I investigated it, and the result of this investigation, carefully and fully made, taking into account every particle of evidence I can get, is that Blasingame is not guilty of the charge. I am as willing to prosecute Blasingame as anybody else, and will do so whenever there is anything to prosecute on. But there is nothing at all now, except the unsupported statement of Maud Bearden, and she talks first on one side of the subject, then on another, and I consider her utterly unreliable. She seems to be deranged on that subject, and will tell the story without a blush before any number of persons, and will tell other things and then deny them.

"Her sister, Mrs. Noyes, signed a paper which accuses Lee Blasingame of the crime. But now Mrs. Noyes says that she was influenced to sign that paper by Van Doren, and that he misrepresented to her what he wanted it for. He said he wanted to confront Lee Blasingame with it, and thoughtlessly Mrs. Noyes signed it. She now says that she knows absolutely nothing of any wrong doing on the part of Blasingame, except what her sister Maud has told her. That leaves the charge to be proved by the testimony of Maud alone, and she tells all sorts of stories about it.

"It is my opinion that Van Doren is using the girl to accomplish a purpose in some other direction. I can explain his actions in no other light. I cannot understand his actions at all, unless some such construction as that is placed upon them.

A BLOODTHIRSTY MINISTER.

"I was shocked," said Judge Church, "when Rev. Collins came to me and told me that he had advised a murder. A man in the heat of passion and under excitement, may kill another, and there be some shadow of excuse for him. But it is different when one calmly and deliberately advises another to commit murder. There is no excuse for it. It is all the more surprising that a minister of the gospel should do such a thing, and I did not know what to think of it.

"I see no reason why Van Doren and this preacher should push themselves to the front in this case so persistently. Who is Van Doren? Who is Collins? I don't know, but I believe that the first is a scamp and that the second is a bigger scamp. My ideas of the duties of a preacher are different from the ideas which Reverend Collins seems to have. The founder of the Christian religion 1900 years ago tried to heal and comfort, tried to do good and to cheer, but Reverend Collins advises murder, stirs up strife, tries to break up families, and causes sorrow and grief instead of giving comfort and hope.

"What is Van Doren here for? I think he has obtained some influence over the girl and is using it to further his designs. She ran off yesterday and signed some sort of an agreement with him. It may or may not be a contract marriage. If it was it has not been recorded. He has it, and if he likes can tear it up, and then who will be the wiser?

"In conclusion, I will repeat that any charge against Blasingame will be pushed the same as a charge against anybody else; but we do not need all this outside help from parties we know not who, and for purposes we know not what."

HINTS OF BLACKMAIL.

Miss Lou Bearden, another sister of Maud, substantiated District Attorney Church's statement concerning Van Doren, who, she says, first became acquainted with her family during the Heath trial, representing himself as a special correspondent of the Chronicle. He became acquainted with Maud Bearden and exhibited a decided preference for her, finally proposing marriage. He was accepted as a suitor, it being agreed the marriage should take place when she arrived of age. Upon this footing Van Doren was received as a member of the family.

"So matters went on until August of this year," said Miss Bearden. "Then Maud and an older sister went to San Jose for a vacation. They were met in San Francisco by Van Doren, and he accompanied them to San Jose, and was with Maud constantly. The girls returned home to Fresno. In a few days Van Doren followed them. Then began the peculiar actions and conduct of Van Doren, which have led up to the present trouble.

"For about four days Van Doren was continually alluding to certain things, making mysterious suggestions and insinuations. He would say, for instance, to mother, an old lady of 51, 'There is great trouble coming, but I will protect your family;' and upon an explanation being demanded, would laugh and say, 'My newspaper training makes me very secretive, and I cannot tell you now, but you need not be alarmed, and you can depend on it that your girls are not connected with it.'

"It continued until the family became so nervous over his conduct that mother demanded of Van Doren an explanation, saying, 'If what you have concerns any member of my family, I have the right to know it, and I demand that you tell me.'

"Whereupon Van Doren laughed and said, 'You can find out nothing from me.' Then Mrs. Bearden said, 'I will go down town to see Judge Graham. He knows about this and I will make him tell me.' And mother and I went down town, but were unable to get any satisfaction, as Judge Graham denied knowing any of these facts, only Van Doren requested to meet Blasingame in Judge Graham's office.

"When we returned home Van Doren sneered and laughed and said, 'I know you would not find out anything. When I get ready for you to know then you will hear it, and not before. I want to see Blasingame before I take any steps in this matter. He is the man I want to deal with,' and he began threatening that he would pu. Blasingame in the penitentiary, or make it cost him $10,000. Then he said, 'I am going to see Mrs. Blasingame, and I propose never to stop till I put Lee Blasingame in the penitentiary or get even with him.'

"So he went up to see Mrs. Blasingame, and she ordered him out of the house as a blackmailer. Up to this time not a single member of our family knew what was on foot, or of the terrible charges which Maud had made against Mr. Blasingame. Father and mother were kept in total ignorance of it. Mother was sick at the time, and she called Maud into the room, and taking the Bible, said: 'I want you to put your hand on this Bible, and swear whether you have ever told anything to Van Doren that will cause trouble between him and Blasingame?' and Maud said yes, that Blasingame had ruined her about two years ago, and she had told Van Doren of it; that she told him when they were on the trip to San Jose, and that he had gone to San Francisco, and had sent the written statement to her here, and she had sworn to it before Judge Crichton, a notary public, Van Doren furnishing the money to make the affidavit.

"Van Doren had also induced another sister to make an affidavit of facts that were within her knowledge, and she now says that the affidavit was prepared by Van Doren, that she signed it without knowing its true meaning, and with the understanding that it was not to be used in any way except so far as Blasingame himself was concerned."

Miss Lou Bearden also stated that Van Doren had made the mysterious allusions mentioned with a view of exciting her father, proposing to bring about a meeting between Mr. Bearden and Lee Blasingame, and have Maud appear on the scene and in the presence of all relate the story of her ruin. He hoped by this plot to work Mr. Bearden up to such a point as to cause him to attack and kill Blasingame, and if he failed Blasingame would kill Mr. Bearden, and thus be guilty of a double crime. This plot Van Doren is said to have confided to one of the Bearden sisters, and after its discovery he was forbidden the house.

"Mr. Collins demanded of father that he go and kill Blasingame; told him that he had a pistol and would take him in a buggy to Blasingame's house and he would call Blasingame out and let father kill him. He also said that he knew where he could get $100 to use in carrying out the plans if father wanted it. He demanded of us that we make our sorrow public by forcing an indictment of Blasingame before the grand jury, and threatened that if we didn't do so he would begin an action to take the children away from papa and mamma as unfit persons to control them, and by every means in his power has he harrassed, annoyed and tried to force us into publicity.

"This failing, because father does not believe Blasingame to be guilty, then Collins attempted to carry the matter out himself, with what success I do not know, but all the members of our family, who were able to attend have been called before the grand jury.

"I met Collins by accident in Graham's office. He appeared angry, and said some one was playing on both sides and he did not propose to stand it; that my family were trying to stop the prosecution of Blasingame; that they had got money for it, and anyone who would stop a prosecution of this kind was of a low standard of honor, and he did not care who they were, and he was not certain but that he would commence an action to show that papa and mamma were not proper persons to take care of girls, and much more in the same strain. His language was such that in the afternoon he apologized to Judge Graham for using such language in his presence, but said that if he (Graham) had not been present he would have said a great 'deal more to the little lady' than he did."

COLLINS' WARM REPLY.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—For some reason unknown to me the Expositor has shown a hostile attitude toward me since I first came to the city. It has, upon every opportunity, misrepresented and sought to injure me, and once, when I wished to explain or reply through its columns, I was openly refused. One of its representatives telegraphed an open falsehood to the San Francisco Chronicle, which paper, upon the written request of a brother pastor, who was also involved in the falsehood, retracted it.

"A lie that is half the truth is ever the worst of lies." (If I have not quoted correctly I have hired "A Pedagogue" to correct it.) This quotation fits exactly the sensational rot of last night's paper. Let me point out a few errors:

When the commission of the felony first came to my attention I, as the father ought to have called at my office, and asked him if he believed in his heart that the crime had been committed. I will give his exact words:

"Mr. Collins, there is no doubt but that Blasingame committed the deed," he said, "What do you propose to do about it?" when he replied:

"I'm a poor man, and he has plenty of money, and I can't do anything. His money will keep him from punishment. What would you do if you were in my place, Mr. Collins?"

I told him that I would do the utmost to bring the villain to justice, but if his money could keep me from getting a hearing and instituting proper investigation, then the honor of my family and the virtue of my child would be avenged by my own hand, I meant what I said then, and I mean it now.

Let me say that the father, mother and Miss Lou all admitted the commission of the crime. The little girl confessed it and a married sister, who said that the deed was repeatedly committed in her presence, substantiated it by a sworn statement, and the brother excused the crime by saying (I quote from a letter), "Any other man would have done the same thing."

Another error. I did not call upon the family "for the purpose of making a pastoral visit," but at the earnest solicitation of the father, who came to my home and urged me to go and see his wife on the matter. They have since sent for me and I have not gone.

I do not wish to give the lie to Judge Church. I prefer to think that his interview was misconstrued, as was my own. I did not tell him that I "calmly and deliberately" advised "another to commit murder." But I did say that in case the wealthy man's money or social position was an impassible bar to proper investigation and prosecution simply because the wronged person was poor, then I had advised the taking of the case in the poor man's hand.

Personally, I am satisfied that certain influences in Judge Church's office have prevented proper investigation in this case. How far he is to blame I cannot say. Mr. Van Doren may be a "scamp" and I may be a "bigger scamp," but this case has proven that I am not for sale, which is more than can be truthfully said of some who have pushed themselves into the front ranks of those who are trying to dump the case.

For the family I have the utmost pity, especially for Miss Lou; she who is least to blame of all, is suffering most. For Judge Church's treatment of the case and his open breach of faith with me I have but contempt. Mr. Blasingame should be made to stand trial. If acquitted (and I think he would be with our present "public prosecutor"), then well and good; if convicted, he should be punished. Mr. Blasingame's money is proof against any harm befalling him, guilty or not guilty. Let me quote again for the Expositor:

"A lie that is half the truth is ever the worst of lies."

J. H. COLLINS.

VAN DOREN'S STORY.

"Inasmuch as my character has been assailed in this matter, and my motives questioned, I will first give a brief history of myself, and I wish to state moreover that I invite the closest scrutiny into my past life," said Mr. Van Doren.

"In 1888 I was employed as bookeeper for Messrs. Dennes and Van Doren of San Jose, Cal., and in 1890 left their employ to make a journey across the southern portion of the African continent. In the spring of 1892, after my return from Africa, I visited my aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sauer of Elk Grove, Cal., going thence to Washington state and British America, returning to California about February 1st, this year.

After a few weeks at Elk Grove and San Francisco, I went to Stockton to see the flood with which that city was inundated. Before leaving San Francisco a friend of mine connected with a San Francisco paper, asked me if I cared to go as far up the San Joaquin valley as Fresno, and requested me if I should to write and let him know what the public sentiment was about the McWhirter murder. I told him 'all right,' and after reaching Fresno, about March 25th, I wrote to him several letters, the import of which was that about all the people I heard say anything seemed to think that a man named Heath, who had been arrested, had committed the crime. That was the first and last thing I have ever written about the Heath case.

"During my stay in Fresno and on April 3d I became acquainted with Miss Maud Bearden, whom I then and have always since considered one of the brightest and most noble young ladies I have ever met. The evening of the afternoon that I first met Miss Maud Bearden she introduced me to her sister, Louise Bearden, whom I then met for the first time in my life. My acquaintance with Maud Bearden ripened rapidly into love, and she reciprocating my feeling, I went to her parents and told them of our affection and explaining the facts. I fully considered her youth and asked their consent to our engagement, the marriage to take place in after years when Maud was of a marringeable age, and if in the meantime her feelings for me should change and she should desire to break the engagement, I promised them that I would consider her at liberty to do so. With that understanding they gave their hearty approval and things were very pleasant and agreeable.

"On May 25th, during my second visit to Fresno, I went to Elk Grove and thence to San Francisco, visiting Fresno one day on June 7th, returning to San Francisco and going thence to the coast counties and Los Angeles and San Bernardino, returning to Fresno on August 8th. I was not in Fresno at all during the Heath trial and was never in the district attorney's office in my life until after September 15th, and then only either at the invitation or by appointment with Louise Bearden, conversing with her almost exclusively about the case. I probably visited the district attorney's office some half dozen times and never have asked of any one connected with the district attorney's office anything about the Heath case or ever sought to pry into or find out anything connected with that office. I am not and never have been a detective or connected with any detective agency or insurance companies, or employed by any one connected with the Heath case in any manner whatever.

"While in the southern part of the state I received a letter from Louise Bearden and also one from Maud, the purport of which was that they intended to visit San Francisco soon, and wanted to know if I would be in San Francisco soon, as they should very much like to have me show them the city. I of course answered that I would be pleased to do so. On August 8th I came to Fresno, remaining until the latter part of the month, then, accompanied by Louise and Maud, went to San Francisco. On Sunday evening, September 3, we all attended the Central M. E. church and heard Rev. Dr. Stille preach, and on returning to the hotel, Louise, who was very tired, soon retired to her room, and Maud and I remained in the sitting room, she reclining on a lounge and I sitting in a chair. After conversing for a short time, a question of mine caused her to ask me if she should tell me all about herself would I despise her. I told her by no means; I would certainly not think any the less of her, and if she had anything to tell me she need have no fear of my loving her the less.

"Thus reassured, and with bitter tears, she told me a story so revolting, so horrible in detail, that until my dying day I can never forget it. Could I blame a little child of only 13 years for being debauched by a man that in all the depths of moral degradation I could not conceive of his parallel? A thousand times no! I placed a hand gently on either cheek when she had finished, and kissed the little tear-stained face, and told her that I freely and fully forgave her for what had happened, and I was very glad she had told me. She seemed very happy then, and said she had wanted so much to tell me all before, but was afraid to do so for fear I would cease to care for her. I told her of the enormity of the crime and of the penalty attached to its commission. She said then, and has never willingly expressed any wish to the contrary, that she wanted the person who had committed the crime punished to the fullest extent of the law. I asked her if she was willing to write a statement of the case and swear to it and she said she was. One evening, three days later, she wrote out the statement, and, going to San Jose the next day to visit her uncle, Judge Lawrence Archer, she left the statement with me and I forwarded it to her at Fresno, where she swore to it. I then visited Mr. Arthur Noyes at 23 Chenery street, San Francisco, and told her I would like to ask her a question, and she could answer it or not, but I would be very much pleased if she would. She said, 'Go ahead,' and I asked her the following question:

"'Do you not know that between the 26th of November, 1891, and the 17th day of May, 1892, while you and your folks were residing near Fresno, that nearly every night L. A. Blasingame was at the vineyard and in the house in which you lived, and that he then accomplished the ruin of your sister Maud?'

"She immediately answered 'Yes,' and I asked her if she was willing to make a statement to that effect and swear to it. She said, 'Yes, of course, and I do hope some one will punish Blasingame. He has ruined our family, and deserves the utmost punishment.'

"She asked me if I would write out about what was necessary, and then when she had changed her dress she would come in and copy it. She went out and I did as she requested. Mrs. Noyes soon returned and wrote out the statement, and in company with another young lady of the house and myself, went before a notary and swore to it.

"I then came to Fresno about September 15th, I think. I found that Blasingame was in San Francisco, but the next day he came home, cutting short his intended visit in San Francisco, as I understand Mrs. Noyes had told him Van Doren is on to the whole business.'

"Thinking Mr. Bearden a man of honor and knowing the just punishment that ought to be meted out in such a case, I determined to try and get him somewhere with Mr. Bearden and let the whole affair come out, and Mr. Bearden could mete out the punishment deserved. But he did not see fit to grant the interview I asked, and next day or so Maud confessed all to her mother.

"How that confession was received I have not time now to tell you, but it was not with forgiveness, kind words and tenderness. For some reason best known to themselves the family developed a desire to quash the whole thing and not let it be prosecuted. Maud was compelled to write letters to me at the instigation of one C. J. Schlwell, demanding the affidavits and breaking off our engagement. That she was coerced into writing these letters I have her sworn statement of October 31st. The abuse of the child and the intimidation practiced on her for some reason finally reached the unbearable stage, and one of her letters, the most pitiful little letter I ever received, caused me to write to Rev. J. H. Collins and Judge Harris, asking that she be protected. Mr. Collins immediately took the matter up and he can tell you what he did.

"On a day I had an appointment with Louise Bearden at the district attorney's office at 2 p.m. When I arrived Blasingame was there, and as soon as I was in the room and knowing I was unarmed, he with one hand on his pistol and the other waving wildly in the air, commenced a tirade of abuse that such people usually adopt. The only witness was Louise Bearden, and how easy it would have been for him to have shot me down in self defense if I had raised a finger. I folded my arms and took a couple of steps towards him, and having told him I did not want any dealings with a felon, waited patiently until he left the room.

"You ask me why the family is trying to suppress the case, and I will ask in return why did Mr. Bearden visit Blasingame's chum? Why was Mrs. Noyes in constant communication with Blasingame and his attorney, and escaped from that attorney's office to evade a subpœna from the grand jury? You may draw your own conclusions. Why does the district attorney, with whom I am not acquainted, say that he forbids me to come to his office? Why does he not want all the evidence in the case? Why? I don't know, do you? Did you ever hear, in all the annals of crime, of a district attorney forbidding a man who has uncovered a crime to come to a public office, yet be in constant communication with the man charged with it?

"Yesterday Maud escaped from her home and swore to the statements of coercion, and knowing full well that we could not marry until after the prosecution of this case, we made another agreement that is entirely satisfactory to ourselves, and of which the public will hear anon. I have plenty more to tell you, and as Louise Bearden says I am not even Van Doren, I refer you to Mr. Gearley, your news agent, C. M. Shortridge of San Jose, Robert Husband, 5 California street, San Francisco, etc.; Also I positively deny that I have counseled with Eugene Dunprey about this case."

FOUND ON A HOG RANCH ON THE SAN JOAQUIN.

Run Down by Sheriff Scott and Sheriff Jackson, and Taken to Oregon.

Sheriff Scott and Sheriff Jackson of Oregon returned about 9 o'clock last night from the foothills with Dr. J. D. Sponogle, who is wanted in Oregon on a charge of rape.

After he was discharged Monday afternoon he was secreted at the Martin place near town, and therefore evaded the search of the officers.

On Tuesday, as is well known, Sheriff Scott took out a warrant for the arrest of W. T. Mattingly for the part he took in Sponogle's escape, whereupon he confessed what knowledge he had, and the officers took a livery team that was guided for funerals and started in pursuit.

Sponogle had left about 10 o'clock Monday night behind Mr. Peters' roadster, with a man for driver and a boy for guide, with a letter of introduction, etc., to Mr. Blair, who resides about sixteen miles northeast of town.

Scott and Jackson went to Mr. Blair's ranch and found that Sponogle had gone with some of Blair's people over to his hog ranch, near the San Joaquin.

Mr. Blair, it seems, had not been informed of Sponogle's reasons for seeking seclusion, and when Sheriff Scott told him why he was wanted he volunteered to assist in his capture.

The hog ranch is about eight miles beyond Lodge postoffice, and the party drove as far as possible along the grade and then saddled their animals and rode into the hog ranch.

They reconnoitred the premises on their arrival but could not find Sponogle. Then, the others being secreted, Mr. Blair went out in search of him and soon found him at the Indian rancheria near by, and on pretense of hunting a stray horse, led him back to the officers, and Sheriff Scott arrested him.

When he saw the sheriff he remarked "Well, it's all up, and I'm glad of it," and stated that he would return to Oregon without resistance.

When they arrived last night they were very dusty and tired, but Sheriff Jackson concluded to return his prisoner to Oregon as swiftly as possible, and left on the northbound train at an early hour this morning.

When spoken to by a reporter, he did not care to talk.

CASTING OUT DEVILS.

TESTIMONY THAT EXORCISM HAS REASONS FOR EXISTENCE.

Signs Through Which One Who Is Possessed Is Recognized—The Conjuration and Other Strange Formulas Employed by the Good Monks.

The possessed woman of Gif is cured now not by the doctors, who were unable to do anything for her, but by the theological science of the cure of the parish and the firmness of Mgr. Goux, bishop of Versailles, which shows that exorcism has its reasons for existence and that "possession" is as real as hysteria. As a matter of fact, the church has never laid down her arms in the presence of the devils.

There are four principal signs through which the possessed one is recognized: 1. No known remedy relieves him. 2. He speaks of incidents and facts beyond his natural reach and which nobody has revealed to him. 3. He foretells events and speaks several languages unknown to him before his affliction. 4. In the presence of a priest and at sacred ceremonies he trembles, suffers pain, writhes and blasphemes.

The Catholic priests, and especially the Dominicans, have from away back practiced exorcism. According to the canons, the exorcist belongs to one of the minor orders which precede the priesthood. He must be humble of heart in his ministry, and if he operates with any thought of display he risks for himself the contagion of the evil spirits that still remain to be cast out.

Ordinarily the ceremony takes place in the church in the presence of the faithful assembled at prayer, particularly at the feasts of the Nativity, of the Resurrection, of the Ascension, of Pentecost, of the Virgin Mary and of the Apostles. After the morning mass, to which the possessed one assists, the exorcist puts on the surplice and assists the priest who puts on the violet colored cope, the symbol of the pains of purgatory. The patient who has confessed then approaches. A stole is passed around his neck to tie the devils that have become the masters of his body. Then the sign of the cross is made upon him, and he is sprinkled with holy water. In Latin the devil is commended to tell his name, to say whether or not he is alone and why he is there. Finally he is ordered to depart. The conjuration in any other language and especially in Hebrew is useless. Hebrew is reserved for satan himself.

The Flagellum demonuma contains the most complete formula of exorcism, consisting of well known prayers mingled with the most ancient and strangest appellations of God, such as "Oh, Adonai Tetragrammaton" and others, which come in part from Chaldea, from Phœnecia and from Greece. The words are supposed to possess in themselves a certain power of evocation of celestial virtues which terrify the infernal legions. Certain words of Christ, according to St. Matthew, are used to drive out evil spirits.

If the demon does not retire immediately, the exorcist takes a painted image representing him and throws it into the consecrated fire along with incense, rue and sulphur, with strong mystic odors, intending to prove by this act that he will send the evil spirit back into his natural element—hell. This done, he places upon the head of the possessed one the book, the relics, the crucifix and sometimes even the host—the last and invincible remedy. According to the authority of certain demonographies, the devil then comes out through the nose of the patient.

In the ancient monasteries they made the exorcist carry upon his person certain amulets containing protective formulas. Sometimes there formulas, written upon pieces of parchment, were swallowed. In the process of digestion the exorcism was accomplished without fatigue.

In our days exorcism has taken refuge in La Trappe. The clergy are somewhat averse to it, while at the same time they do not refuse to admit it. The man who breaks the spells is very old. But the devils cast out by the good monks are reduced to the tormenting of animals. Pigs are their favorites. Then the old spell smasher whips them with beads and sprinkles them with holy water, and the pigs recover and become happy, because the devils go away.

Mr. J. K. Huysmans has been able to speak de visu of the power of demons and the efficacity of exorcisms. Moreover, the eminent writer was well acquainted with one of the most learned demonographers of his time, the Abbe Bonilan, who ran through hell in his bare feet, holding the host in his hands.

Either at the church of Sanctot or the church of Senneville, I received this curious document from M. Gilbert Augustin Thierry, the author of "Une Ame en Peine." The cure of Petites-Dalles in curing the possessed says a special mass called the "red mass," or "mass of the martyrs." Red flowers are placed upon the altar, and the priest wears a red stole. The church is draped in purple.

But, stranger still, a few years ago the wife of the editor of a leading Catholic journal in Paris, being troubled by evil spirits, witnessed the death of the Dominican priest who was endeavoring to exorcise her, and who was unable to guard himself against the forces with which he was contending.—Paris Figaro.

The Perfect Foot.

The Greek statuary, much of it dated centuries before Christ, seems to prove that the Greeks had feet much like those of modern Americans. The most beautiful of the Greek feet are hollowed out well both inside and out. They have short heels, high insteps and long, straight toes, slightly spatulate at the ends. That is the type of the most beautiful modern foot. It is, on the whole, a foot not frequently seen in its perfection, for often one or the other element of beauty is wanting.—San Francisco Argonaut.

WOMEN IN MOTION.

The First and Last Rule in Graceful Walking Is Not to Hurry.

If you carefully observe a throng of women walking on the street, you will be struck by the fact that nearly every woman walks far too rapidly for anything like grace to enter into her movements. Tall women for some reason walk more slowly than little ones. Perhaps the short woman gets into the habit of hurrying from trying to keep up with her willowy sister. Then there is the jerky woman, and there is unfortunately only too many of her. Her elbows, shoulders and hips move from side to side with every movement of her feet. If you are acquainted with her, you will find that she has usually a nervous temperament. Some women have a gait that is hard to describe. If they were to walk in the snow or some place where their footsteps would be visible, there would be two tracks parallel to each other and about a foot apart. This is a particularly ugly walk, though not nearly so common as the jerky variety.

These are by no means exceptional cases. Put these same women in a ballroom, and their every movement in dancing would be full of grace and spring. It is because they have been taught to dance, while the ordinary means of locomotion, complex though it is, are left to chance.

An easy, graceful walk is not impossible of acquirement, though, like all things that are worth having, it takes time and patience. Julia Marlowe, when about 15 years of age, was afflicted with a most ungainly walk. To cure herself of this she used to walk for miles along the seashore every day, with her hands on her hips to keep them motionless. Whether she succeeded, no one who has ever seen her on the stage need ask.

One of the most graceful women I have ever seen told me the other day when I asked for her secret: "I have no secret. When I was a child, my mother impressed on me most firmly that I was always to turn my toes out. This keeps the knees straight, so that all the movement comes from the hips. I keep my chest and chin well up and make it a rule never to hurry, though as I never mince my steps I get over the ground more rapidly perhaps than those who seem to walk faster."

In learning to walk it is best to begin, as Herbert Spencer says about style, with a knowledge of what constitutes a beauty and what a blemish. A good walk is, however, about as elusive and hard to define as a good style. Still there are some very imperative "don'ts" that are well to remember.

Don't, for instance, look at your feet when walking, but hold your head well up in the air.

Don't shuffle your feet. A little thoughtfulness and a little practice in high stepping will soon break up this ugly habit.

Don't bend back at the waist under the impression that you are thereby walking erectly. It throws the stomach forward and is almost as inimical to grace as round shoulders.

Finally, don't allow yourself to walk "pigeon toed"—that is, with the toes turned in or straight. You can never be graceful in movement while you do.

An ideal place in which to practice walking would be a long room with a mirror at each end. Though this is usually impracticable, you should by all means practice in front of a mirror, or you may only accentuate bad habits. It is unnecessary to say that heavy skirts and tight corsets are quite incompatible with freedom of motion. Do not bother about the shoulders. Hold the chest well forward, and they will take care of themselves. Then, with the chin well up and the toes turned out, you may literally "walk a chalk line."

It is always hard to tell what to do with the hands. It is said that no woman under 25 has ever learned how to carry these offending members. But this, I think, was written of English women. The natural way—to have them hanging at the sides or loosely clasped in front—is not considered elegant. And to have them glued to the sides as far as the waist line, and then bent in at the elbow, is not only awkward in itself, but it elevates the shoulders in the most unlovely way. Therefore most women try to obviate the difficulty by carrying something in the hands. It does seem strange that the most useful members of the body should be so unpleasantly in evidence when they are not in use. But however you elect to carry them, remember that the first and last rule in good walking is not to hurry.—Philadelphia Record.

The Hunt Memorial Library.

Mrs. Mary A. Hunt and Miss A. Hunt, her daughter, have given notice that they will bring suit against the city of Nashua, N. H., to recover $50,000 which they presented to the city for the foundation of the Hunt Memorial library, on the ground that the conditions of the gift have not been complied with within a reasonable time. The gift was made over a year ago, and apparently the citizens and the city government have done nothing but wrangle ineffectively over the site for the building.—Nashua Letter.

Nellie Grant Sartoris.

"I had to learn of my daughter's misery," says Mrs. U. S. Grant, in an interview in Chicago, "through the American press." The stories about Mrs. Sartoris' unhappy domestic life are, according to her mother, in a frank statement of which the sentence quoted is the prelude, without foundation in fact. Mrs. Grant is certainly qualified to speak with authority, and her statement should be accepted as final.—Exchange.

A Jewess Physician.

About two years ago Mlle. Felicie Mendelssohn, a Jewish lady, who holds the diploma of the medical faculty of Paris, established herself at Cairo. Recently Dr. Mendelssohn was called to attend on the mother of the Khedive, and so excellent was her treatment of the patient that his highness has appointed her doctor to the palace.

Some one the other day put arsenic into a water wagon at Columbia Falls, Mont., to kill the whole population of the town.

Ho, for the Midwinter Fair.

Section 6. Every person or association of persons to whom such license should be granted shall keep a respectable, quiet, and orderly place of business and for a failure so to do shall pay to the County of Fresno a penalty of $100 and upon proof to the satisfaction of the Board after a hearing upon reasonable notice if such petitioner shall be found not to have kept at any particular time such orderly place as aforesaid, he shall in addition to the aforesaid sum of $100
